Every time a person sees my email address, the person is shocked into action. Lima beans themselves are extremely disgusting. Lima bean purees are beyond belief. Lima bean purees is foul and filthy. It is despicable. You would get just getting around to mash lima beans up into puree is one of the worst crimes ever. You would probably pass out if you dared consume lima bean puree. I want that shock to galvanize people to action to resist the evil lima bean industry. I want people to be powerful, destroying the lima bean industry.

You too could create an email address to destroy the lima bean industry:

- ilovelimabeans@email.com
- limabeansaretoolsofsatan@hotmail.com
- my entire existence is devoted to eradicating lima beans and crushing the lima bean industry from the face of the earth@yahoo.com.

The sky is the limit. You could do some serious damage to the lima bean industry. You could liberate humanity by using your email account. The lima bean industry tries to tell us people adore lima beans. People don't like lima beans. People don't even want to tolerate lima beans. People certainly don't adore lima beans. The lima bean industry gets people like Michael Jordan and Britney Spears to advertise for them. I don't care what these people say. Lima beans are still nasty no matter how attractive the models are. Lima beans are rotten. Cindy Crawford is on billboards everywhere advertising lima beans. But Cindy Crawford is wrong. Boycott everything related to anyone who dares endorse lima beans. It is not right.

The last time I gave this lecture, I mused about the possibility of using different types of beans for hummus besides the staple garbanzo beans. You would think it would be possible. People just need to be imaginative. In the meantime, I have discovered a place that actually tried this. The People's Food Co-op in La Crosse, Wisconsin, created what was called Fat Free Hummus. Instead of containing garbanzo beans, it contained yellow split peas. It was alright. It was certainly not as good as regular hummus. One of my friends said, "it sounds just like bean mash." She says, "the oil gives the flavor to the hummus." She is right. It was a good attempt.

I fear a slippery slope. Today we might have yellow split pea in hummus. We might get to the point where there is lima beans in hummus. Horror of horrors! The lima bean industry would love it.

Lima beans. Blima beans, we love it. It wants to find ways to push lima beans on us. But don't let it. Don't, don't, don't. No matter how badly you need a dip for your chips, don't let the lima bean industry push this foul product on you. I hope we never see the day where we have lima bean hummus.

Have you ever pondered the social significance of lima beans? You should have. There should be studies, dissertations, and theses on such topics as:

- Lima beans and deviance
- Lima beans and crime
- Lima beans on the family
- Lima beans and labor
- Lima beans and cognitive dissonance
- Lima beans and groupthink
- Lima beans and authoritarianism
- Lima beans and dogmatism
- Lima beans and collective behavior
- Lima beans and social change

Whatever there is to study, most certainly lima beans would cause a negative effect on it.

It is time to destroy the lima bean industry. The lima bean industry is evil. Lima beans are worthless substance. Lima beans are to be avoided at all costs. You should dedicate every single fiber of your being to resisting the evil lima bean industry. You should do everything you can, everything in your power to set back the lima bean industry and advance noble humanity. Let's liberate the earth. Let's crush the lima bean industry to a bloody pulp.

Good evening.
